Egypt and Syria. In an apparent move to widen a potential coalition, Syria has recently been trying to mend fences between Egypt and Iran, but Cairo has pointedly rejected such overtures. While Cairo has been a pro-ponent of the Golan talks, it bas been an even greater proponent of the Palestinian cause. Over . weekend, Palestinian Authority President Yasser beld talks with

If Netanyahu can demonstrate that he is sincere on the Palestinian track, Cairo is likely to respond. So far, the government has refused to delineate measurable criteria that the Palestinians should meet for Israel to lift the closure.

Netanyahu's foreign policy adviser Dore Gold is expected to fly to Cairo today or tomorrow to prepare the visit. He will apparently meet with Mubarak's national security adviser Osama el-Baz. Meanwhile, Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa left for Moscow to discuss the peace process, stoking concern that he may seek to rouse Russia to lake a more vocal stand on the territorial component.

Netanyahu also expressed his "disappointment" at Egypt's hosting the recent Arab sum-mit, which warned of a serious deterioration of the peace process unless Jerusalem changed its peace policies.

In economics, the Egyptian role has been more cooperative than confrontational. Egypt is supposed to host the US-backed Middle East business summit this fall, which is a priority for the Clinton administration.

It was also a proponent of the establishment of a Cairo-based Middle East development bank. But, with Netanyahu's muted support for the bank during his Washington visit. main target is children," Yossi Sarid (Meretz) charged. The opposition also charged that the cabinet had approved the cuts

Coalition MKs who responded to the motions were often equally critical of both the plan's content and the rapidity with which it was developed. "[The government] pushed us by saying that Netanyahu has to go [to the US] with a budget," Shlomo Benizri (Shas) said. "Why? The budget doesn't have to be ready for another half a year! Haste is the work of the devil. "It will be very hard for me to vote for this budget in the future," he continued, adding that he was opposing the no-confidence motion

"Look at who is voting no-confidence in us, the ones under whose EVELYN GORDON

rule the gap between rich and poor became the largest in the Western world," Michael Kleiner (Gesher)

Finance Minister Dan Meridor noted that proposals virtually identical to those he submitted were included in a 100-day plan pre-pared by Yossi Beilin in the event of a Labor victory. Beilin's plan even included cuts in some services which the Likud would not touch, such as reducing National Insurance Institute payments to the elderty, he said.

He also attacked Histadrut Secretary-General Amir Peretz, who presented Labor's no-confidence motion. Meridor noted that the Histadrut's failure to fulfill its part of the Kupat Holim Clalin recovery plan had cost the Treasury more than NIS 60 million.

Meridor stressed that the government could not simply ignore a budget deficit which is expected to reach NIS 11 billion this year, and a balance of payments deficit expected to reach $5b. If it had done so, he said, the opposition would have attacked it, and justly so, for failing to address these problems, which could halt economic growth if they continue.

Meridor insisted that the plan would not hurt the weakest members of society. Two-thirds of all families, for instance, will not be affected by the planned cuts in child allowances, and the welfare budget will actually grow in 1997.

Taxing the rich, he added, is not an option. According to Meridor, Israel's tax burden already is more than 40 percent of the gross national product - compared to "20-something percent" in the US - and 90% of these taxes are paid by the richest 20% of the population.

There is no contradiction between economic efficiency and social sensibility," he said, adding that this combination is the government's goal.

"The people will judge, in the 2000 elections, what kind of economy we found and what kind of economy we delivered to them four

Mordechai promises slow easing of closure

ISRAEL will shortly introduce a gradual lifting of the closure of the territories. Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai said yesterday.

Meeting with Egyptian Mohammed Bassiouny, Mordechai said: "In the near future, we will implement a gradual easing of the closure imposed on Judea. Saniaria, and the Gaza Strip. This will be dependent on the Palestinian Authority's strugele against terror and the security situation."

Since the government took office, the closure has been slightly lifted to allow about 25,000 Palestinians to work in Israel. In the meeting with Mordechai at the Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv, Bassiouny raised both the closure and the peace process. Mordechai replied that while lsrael's new government is keen on advancing the peace process, it would do so "cautiously and with

Pinhasi to petition High Court against lifting his immunity

LAWYERS for MK Raphael Pinhasi (Shas) yesterday said they would file a High Court petition against the decision by Attorney-General Michael Ben-Yair to ask the Knesset to lift his immunity to stand charges for fraud and falsifying documents relating to the 1988 elections

Anomey Dan Avi-Yitzhak said there is no reason to ask the House Committee to lift his client's immunity again, since such a move was overturned by the courts in 1993. The House Comminee and plenum bad agreed to lift Pinhasi's immunity in 1993, but following a High Court petition by Pinhasi, a revote was ordered on the grounds that the original plenum vote had not met the rules of due process. In the revote, the plenum decided against lifting his immunity.

Three weeks ago, the Movement for Quality Government in Israel petitioned the High Court, demanding Ben-Yair ask the Knesset to lift Pinhasi's immunity. Ben-Yair agreed with the petition. There is also a pending petition by Meretz leader Yossi Sarid, who claims that Pinhasi is not fit to chair the House Committee, which is responsible for hearing requests for immunity to be lifted.

Pinhasi has said that if he is elected as the committee's permanent chairman, he will not chair meetings on immunity. Sarid has said he is opposed to Pinhasi chairing the communee even temporarily.

This issue is to be discussed by the House Committee today. Yesterday, it discussed lifting Pinhasi's immunity, but the discussion was halted by Yitzhak's petition.

Knesset legal adviser Zvi Inbar recommended postponing the discussion pending the new decision. He noted, however, that the principle of electoral equality means that an MK cannot be prevented from carrying out bis duties in the House.

Kahalani: Budget cuts won't harm traffic or school safety

AMONG the changes Internal Security Minister Avigdor Kahalani is considering because of the budget cuts are closing small prisons, cutting four Border Police companies, and making other government ministries pay for the VIP protection Internal Security Ministry personnel provide.

Kahalani told the Knesset Interior Committee the cuts would affect manpower, but said he would make every effort not to harm protection for schools or the Traffic Police.

Regarding the demonstrations on Jerusalem's Rehov Bar-Ilan on Shabbat, Kahalani said: "I will make sure anyone who wants to send one of my men to the hospital goes there." However, he added he would review allega-tions of police brutality. MK him by name. He told the Labor Knesset faction that Netanyahu's first Halpert (United Torah Judaism) to official trip "had been in the of the word." Peres said the first foreign visit should have been to an Arah country not the US, although he stressed the excellent ties between Israel and the US, and with President Bill Clinton, in particular.

He said he is "very concerned" by the new government's attitude toward the negotiations with the Syrians and Palestinians. Netanyahu is causing the Arab world to unite against Israel and is killing the peace process, he said. Peres said the Likud claimed it would not agree to preconditions to negotiations, but stated it would not be prepared to withdraw. "What is that if not a pre-condition?" he asked.

He also scoffed at Netanyahu's demand that the Arab world prove it would act democratically before continuing to make progress with the peace process. "I want to believe that peace will bring democracy," Peres said. He said hy waiting for democracy before peace, the government is risking being left with neither.

He warned that Iraq could have nuclear weapons within a year of the UN supervisors leaving, and stressed the need to be prepared for non-conventional war and terror, rather than conventional war. "Don't underestimate fundamentalism," he warned, Peres called for a double coalition: with the Arab states against fundamentalism and with the world, led by the US, against terror. If the coalition against fundamentalism did not include Arab countries, he said, "it will turn into a Jewish-Moslem conflict."

Members of the Labor faction are scheduled to meet today with members of the baredi community to discuss the Rehov Bar-Ilan issue. MK Ophir Pines (Labor) is trying to reach an agreement with Meretz to hold a joint demonstration, after Shahbat, against the closure of BEZEQ spent NIS 12 million on advisers last year, many of them hired by special contract without appraval from the campany's committee on advisers.

This was one of the shortcomings disclosed in the state comptroller'a special report on Bezeq.

The report, which covers operations only until the beginning of 1995, updates the comptroller's previous report on the company, which was issued in 1993. A spokesman for the comptroller's office explained the lag by the fact that its investigators are busy throughout the year on the massive annual report on the

There are thansands of phone lines that serve large numbers of callers, and therefore frequently respond with a busy signal. It is in the company's interest to persuade such subscribers to obtain additional lines or switch equipment, but the comptroller found it has done too little to eliminate overburdened lines.

Bezeq was also found wanting regarding custnmer complaints. It receives many queries about 'unfounded' phone bills, and the comptroller found that these are often examined only "superficially" and claimed unjustified, even though the company lacks documentation proving it had checked tor at the war crimes trial of former SS captain Erich Priebke asked an Italian military court yesterday to sentence the 82year-old defendant to life in prison.

Italy seeks life for ex-SS captain Priebke

Priebke showed no emotion as military prosecutor Antonino Intelisano ended his nearly fourhour summation of the case with a request that the German be jailed

"Having extablished the responsibility of the defendant, the prosecution asks that the punishment of justice be applied: life in prison." Intelisano said.

Priebke is accused of being one of the main organisers of the SS massacre of 335 men and boys at the Ardeatine Caves on March 24, 1944 during the Nazi German occupation of Rome. Relatives of some of the victims applauded in court when Intelisano made his recommendation.

Intelisano maintained that Priebke, who had been assigned to the SS beadquarters in Rome, was present at every stage of the mascacre, which he called a "macabre act of revenge"

The SS carried out Italy's worst wartime atrocity after Italian partisans killed 33 German soldiers in a bomb attack in Rome a day

"Priebke was at the Ardeatine Caves from the start to the finish of the operation," the prosecutor said. "He had the list and marked off the names of the victims as they were led into the caves in groups of shooting two of the victims, but said he would have been killed himself if he had refused to follow

Intelisano discounted this defense argument, saying documents admitted as evidence showed SS officers who disobeyed orders were court martialled and sent to the front to fight.

"Priebke was in a position to be aware of the manifest criminality of the orders," he said.

Defense attorney Velio di Rezze told journalists he would ask the court to take account of "mitigating circumstances".
"He only followed orders and then for 50 years led an exemplary life," di Rezze said.

Priehke was extradited to Italy last November from Argentina, where he had lived under his own identity since 1948 in the Andean mountain resort of Bariloche as a shopkeeper and hotelier.

Since arriving in Italy, he has been held in preventive custody at a military prison in Rome.

His trial opened on May 8 and has been dogged by controversy, including prosecution allegations of bias among the judges towards Priebke.

It continues today with closing arguments from lawyers for relatives of victims, who are attached to the case as civil plaintiffs. The PARIS - Europe's top human rights court yesterday tossed ont a lawsuit filed by terrorist Carlos the Jackal, who contends French agents illegally arrested him in Sudan in 1994.

The European Court for Human Rights said Carlos' complaint was unfounded, France Info radio reported. His lawyers had sued claiming he was "kidnapped" in Sudan by French anthorities who lacked an interna-tional arrest warrant.

Carlos did not immediately respond to the ruling by the court, based in the eastern city of Strasbourg.

The 46-year-old Venezuelanhorn convict, whose real name is Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, was arrested on Aug. 14; 1994, in Sudan and taken in chains to Paris.

Carlos alleges he was drugged, tied up and handed to French agents hy Sudanese authorities at Khartoum airport in a shadowy deal. France says he was legally extradited. He has been been held at a maximum-security prison in solitary confinement,

By his own count, the global gun-for-hire has killed 83 people in a gruesome spree of bombings, bijackings and assassinations.

Authorities have at various times linked him to the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the 1972 Munich Olympics and the 1976 hijacking of an Air France jet to Uganda. His most audacious op-eration was to kidnap 11 ministers at an OPEC conference in Vienna in 1975.

Family and friends of Dermot McShane mourn by his graveside during his funeral in Londonderry yesterday. McShane died after being run over by an army armored vehicle during riots in the city on Friday.

Thousands attend Ulster riot funeral; Britain arrests IRA suspects

CATHOLICS united vesterday at the fimeral of an anti-British militant slain in week-long riots that left Northern Ireland's peace process in shreds.

Several thousand mourners walked behind the hearse bearing 35-year-old Dermot "Ton-to" McShane in Londonderry, the province's second-largest and mostly Catholic town.

On the mainland, British anti-terrorist police vesterday arrested seven men, seizing enough components to make 36 bombs and said they had narrowly averted a series of IRA attacks in London and the south-east of England.

McShane was fatally wounded Saturday when an armored vehicle rammed a barricade being used by several men lobbing gasoline bombs. His coffin was covered with an Irish flag and buried in the cemetery plot reserved for members of the outlawed Irish National Liberation Army, a rival splinter gang of the IRA.

In a sign of how anger at the British government's bandling of last week's Protestant marches has united Catholics, the mourners included Martin McGuinness, a senior figure in the IRA-allied Sinn Fein party, and John Hume, leader of the Social Democratic and Labor Party, Sinn Fein's moderate rival for Catholic votes.

"It's been a dark week in our city. The death of Dermot revives memories of years past," said the Rev. said the Rev. Con McLoughin, who conducted the funeral at St. Columba's Roman Catholic church.

"Scarcely in the 21 years that I have been here have I found people so saddened and depressed almost to the point of despair," the priest told the packed church. "Almost every BELFAST family in this parish had suffered in the course of 'the troubles.' The hope had been that, just maybe, the nightmare was over."

In London, Sir Patrick Mayhew, the senior British official in Northern Ireland, announced a wide-ranging review of the routing and policing of parades, but seemed pessimistic about what could be achieved.

"There are no immediately ohvious answers," Mayhew told the House of Commons. Other lawmakers, however, pointed accusingly at the pro-British unionist parties.

"We in this house are entitled to expect that fellow parliamentarians ... show a higher standard of leadership than we saw last week -higher leadership than samply saying, "there is a crowd, I must follow it," said Sir David Steel of the Liberal Democratic Party.

"I believe we were only a few hours away from grave loss of life in London and the southeast," police commander John Grieve told a news conference bours after his meo had swooped on four south London addresses.

"A substantial amount of bomb-making equipment was recovered at these addresses. including components to make 36 devices. including time and power units," Grieve said.

The rumber of devices suggests there was to be a whole series of attacks over a prolonged period," he added, describing the operation as "significant success in our struggle against Irish Repubbican Army terrorism. The arrested men were being held under the preventioo of terrorism act, which is normally used to counter activities linked to the Northern Ireland conflict.

It was the second major find of bomb-making material in London since the IRA ended a 17month old ceasefire in February in protest at what it saw as British intransigence in the Northern Ireland peace process.

"We recovered a quantity of documentation including maps and false identities for those who had been targeting London's utilities," Grieve said, but declined to elaborate.

In February police found vast amounts of Semtex explosives and other bomb-making material at the home of an IRA agent who killed himself with his own bomb on a London bus. The IRA have planted seven bombs in Britain since Fehruary including a truck bomb which blew up a shopping centre in Manchester in June, injuring some 200 people. Yesterday's arrests followed a joint campaign by police and the MI5 secret security service,which has recently been given increased powers to track down terrorists. Residents in one south Londoo street cordoned off by police overnight reported hearing gunfire during the swoop, but Grieve said the police had in fact been discharging tear gas into the homes to minimize resistance.

NEW YORK (AP) - Bob Dole has fallen further behind President Clinton as large numbers of voters defect from the likely Republican presidential nominee, a poll released vesterday found.

Dole lost 7 percentage points in the last three weeks, falling to 30%, while Clinton held steady at 54% in a hypothetical two-way matchip, according to the poll for the new MSNBC cable network and internet site.

In a three-way race, Clinton got 50%. Dole 25% and Ross Perot 13%, according to the national telephone survey of 804 registered voters conducted July 12-14. An NBC-Wall Street Journal poll June 20-25 gave Clinton 47%, Dole 32% and Perot 13%.

With a sampling-error margin of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points in the new poll and 2.5 points in its predecessor, Dole's drop is significant.

Prince Charles and Princess Diana began divorce proceedings yesterday to end their 15-year marriage, which started with a dream wedding and ended in a loveless nightmare. Neither the beir to the British throne nor the former Lady Diana Spencer, whose 1981 wedding at St Paul's cathedral was televised worldwide, was present at the three-minute divorce bearing in a drab London courtroom. Judge Gerald Angel granted the couple a "decree nisi", the first stage of a divorce that will become final on August 28, when a "decree absolute" is granted. The decree nisi said the marriage bad "irretrievably" broken

> The divorce was by mutual consent on the grounds that they have been separated for more than two years.

In a court affidavit later released to the media, the prince said he and the princess officially separated in November 1993. He added: "Both myself and the respondent recognized there were irreconciliable differences and that accordingly we could no

In his affidavit submitted for the divorce proceedings be said. Prime Minister John Major announced his separation from Diana to parliament in November 1993. In fact the announcement was made in November 1992.

Lawyers for Charles, 47, and Diana, 35, announced on Friday that they bad agreed the terms of the royal divorce settlement. Diana will lose the title Her

On the day their divorce came to court, the royal couple were at opposite ends of the earth. Prince Charles was in Brunei, where he is taking part in 50th birthday celebrations for the Sultan. The princess was in Londoo at Kensington Palace, the royal residence she will keep as part of the divorce settlement. She is understood to be planring a holiday this week in

Messing with the market

HERE is little to be said for facing off against a stampeding herd. Yet that is what numerous commentators, poliocians and businessmen seem to want of the government and the Bank of Israel right now, with their calls to lower interest rates and take other emergency measures. But however the government and the central bank might try to sweeten the pot, there is little they can do to enoce panicked savers (and probably money managers too) back from the safety of hank deposits and savings plans.

Stock markets are generally credited with pre-dicting economic events several months in advance. And the TASE is probably not wide of the mark. The previous government mismanaged the economy, spending what it could not afford and leaving the nation with a massive overdraft. Sooner or later the country was going to have to pay the price and, to its credit, the new government wasted no time in grasping the nettle. But with burgeoning inflation, a currentaccount deficit lurching towards crisis propor-oons and an overspent budget, the pain was inevitable.

Higher interest rates and reduced spending, the only remedies sensibly available to the government (raising taxes is just a way of cutting people's incentive to work hard and produce economic growth, and of ensuring they have maximum reason to evade taxes), mean that the economy slows. Corporate profits duly fall, resulting in lower company values and stock prices. The stock market, having seen this all before, cuts prices several months in advance. As inflation comes under control, interest rates can fall and the economy can begin to grow, with the stock market having predicted this, and acted upon it, around six months earlier It's a well known phenomenon found all over the world. It's called the economic cycle.

All this does not mean that all is well with Israel's capital market and that now might not be a good opportunity to eliminate some troublesome anomalies. But anyone who thinks that some tweaking here and there is going to make any significant short-term difference to the stock market is very much mistaken. The numerous economic plans unveiled by the Japanese government over the last few years, in vain efforts to revive the ailing Tokyo stock exchange, are adequate proof of that.

In the good old bygone days of socialism, when no one lived for very long after they stopped working, generous, state-subsidized pensions were all very well. Now, with life dividends and share price.

expectancy rising, the costs of old age are spiraling out of control. If the government is to continue to guarantee pension levels something somewhere is going to have to give. Either the government will forgo significant parts of its spending to finance pension subsidies, or they will just print the money to meet their obligations and inflation be damned (see Labor, 1992-

As other Western countries are increasingly realizing, workers will have to take responsibility for their retirement. They will have to save more and start sooner if they want a comfortable old age. That subsidies are provided by the government to the pension funds is an increasingly dangerous and unaffordable anomaly, which also happens to divert funds from other invest-

Tax anomalies, too, abound. Local stock market gains, savings plans, hank deposits and income from letting residential property are taxfree. Gains made on foreign stock markets and bond interest attract 35% tax, while investment in private companies (arguably, the most eco-nomically productive form of investment) is taxed at the taxpayer's highest marginal rate (up to 50%). In the US and the UK the source of gains is generally disregarded for tax purposes.
What does make a difference is how long one holds the asset. With certain restrictions, longterm holdings, particularly in stocks, are taxed more favorably than the profits of short-term speculation. And savers can tailor or manage their own (long-term) portfolios without being forced, as Israelis are, into costly and poorly managed provident funds. Ironing out tax anomalies is certainly just and sensible. But one of the central rules of investing is that tax considerations should be secondary to the profit-making potential and risk profile of the investment. One of the TASE's biggest problems is that the playing field is anything but even.

With company law, securities regulation and corporate governance the way they are, the game is rigged in favor of company owners and executives who make sure, via salaries, bonuses and stock option schemes that they vote themselves, that any value they create is not shared with other shareholders. Uotil company law is rewritten and investing institutions start to mobilize their voting power, many investors will simply take the view that there is little point in investing in companies which, no matter how micro-economically attractive their business, have little or no interest in maximizing profits,

PRIME Minister Netanyahu's ought to be taught in school. In terms of language and structure, clarity and presentation, it was almost perfect, and most of its messages were tailored-made for the tastes of the audience, especially the Republicans.

It was, furthermore, a pleasure to hear an Israeli prime minister speaking English as it should be spoken, with the occasional Hebrew words pronounced as any Sabra would pronounce them. The problem with the speech was its content. Netanyahu cited the three pillars on which peace must rest - security, reciprocity and democracy, including human rights. Security, he stressed, must precede peace. But history (not one of the PM's fortes) teaches that security is one of the fruits of peace. This doesn't mean Israel should tolerate terror, which the Palestinian Authority hasn't done enough to prevent and which Syria appears unwilling to do anything to stop.

But is the way to get the PA and Syria in play the game Israel wants them to play to assure them in advance that they will never get what they want - a Palestinian state and the Golan Heights. respectively?

Reciprocity is a nice concept. But what does Netanyahu mean hy it? That if the Palestinians agree to Israel's remaining permanently in Judea, Samaria and the Gaza Strip and to its settling another half-mil-SAM FORMAN lion Jews there, and if the Syrians Issues like this divide the country. But when it comes to what reflect the popular mood. And as agree to Israel's remaining perma-nently on the Golan Heights we will let them open embassies in Jerusalem? Reciprocity cannot exist unless the sides treat each other as equals. Give and take between rider and horse or between master and slave isn't reciprocity.

BUT THE greatest problem with Netanyahu's speech was its concepts of democracy.

It seemed, from what the premier said, that the root of the Arab-Israeli conflict was the absence of democracy and human rights in Arab society. As if the Jews, returning to their historic homeland after 2,000 years in exile, had come back to a land settled by an enlightened people living according to the rules of democracy, this people would simply have welcomed them, then taken a democratic vote to vacate their towns and villages and move on elsewhere

Of course the nature of the conflict stems from the fact of confrontation between two peoples with very different tradicions and systems.

But what it is about is the claim of each of those two peoples to a single piece of land that each regards as its historic homeland to the exclusion of the other.

What the peace process - which began in 1974 with the disengagement agreements between Israel on the one hand and Egypt and Syria on the other - is about is Arab acceptance of the fact that the Jewish state is here to stay, and that the Arabs must come to terms with it; and it is about Israel's willingness to give up much of its territorial gains in the Six Day War in return for peace with security and economic integration in the region. That is reciprocity in the Middle East context. The argument that democratic states do not make war or that human rights violations prevent peacemaking is also faulty. Was the state that initiated the Sinai Campaign in 1956 and the Lebanon war in 1982 not a democracy? And on the basis of Israel's own highly problematic human rights record and its inability to complete the enactment of basic human rights legislation would Netanyahu claim Israel isn't fit to make peace?

It might be statistically true that democratic states are less inclined to start wars, and that those who are conscious of human rights are less likely to commit atrocities in both war and peace.

But in the final reckoning the making of war and peace has to do with interests, and not with democracy or human rights.

In his speech Netanyahu pointed out that what Israel wants most of all is security.

The moment he realizes that these can be attained only through peace - and that peace will come only through compromise - it won't only be the US Congress that gives our prime minister a standing ovation.

CCORDING to a reporter who covered the prime minister's visit America, Binyamin Netanyahn is a "cold character... who needs a long time to really open up." And yet, this newsman went on to observe, in Washington Neranyahu was much less uptight than he is in Jerusalem."

Thinking this over I realized the truth of it, and, moreover, that noticeably more human warmth seemed to emanate from Netanyahu than one usually senses. One could even add that the prime minister's English sounded somehow richer than his Hebrew. Yet why should this be? I couldn't come up with any explanation.

Then I began to read the - mostly unfair - Hebrew press coverage of the visit, with its scarcely concealed contempt for the prime minister, and

I felt I was onto something. When and where else has a national leader had to face a problematic foreign government on foreign soil while subject to hosole treatment from his own media entourage? It put me in mind of what the prophet Micah said, that "A man's enemies are the meo of his own house."

After one of the many standing ovacous he received in Congress Netanyahu quipped, "I wish something like this would happen to me io the Knesset." It was more than a mere witticism. It went far

Even later, when the Hehrews were already free, simply to be able to lead them Moses needed a badge of distinction, something that would create distance: "... all the Children of Israel saw Moses, behold, the skin of his face shone; and they were afraid to come nigh him (Exodus, 34:30).

Then we have Chaim Weizmann, the man who realized Herzl's vision. He was always more at home in England and in English than in the land and language whose promise he did so much to fulfill. And when, at long last, he came to live here as president of the newly-born state, he remained aloof, almost estranged from his people. All these leaders acted in agonizing periods for our people. But surely these are different times. Isn't our country strong, prosperous and free?

Yes - and no. Four years of a "peace process" has made of us a people that is in existential danger, that again needs a leader who draws some of his strength from

Mehta-morphosis: Composer is 'rehabilitated'

UBIN Mehta, having recently celebrated his 60th birthday, is making Merry. For the first ome in his career, or in the history of the Israel Philharmonie Orchestra, the IPO's musical director for life will conduct Franz Lebar's operetta The Merry Widow.

rang wess

While it's not a breakthrough oo the scale of conducting Wagner in a regular IPO concert - a dream on which Mehta hasn't given up -Lehar was, in fact, a once-"banned" composer because of his alleged affiliation to the Nazis.

"I did some research in Vienna and found out that Lehar was the greatest philanderer of his ome," says Mehta, sitting in the conductor's room in the Mann Auditorium, between concerts, rehearsals and meeongs. "But once the Nazis came to power, he protected his Jewish wife and left all other women."

As for Wagner, Mehta is even more sensiove aboot the subject than ever. "I once spoke as a musician, now I speak as a human being. I really want to do Triston und Isolde here. We should do it."

The Viennese style exemplified by Lehar is very close to Mehta's heart. He spent many years studying in Vienna and is often asked to conduct that city's annual New Year's gala, a program of waltzes by Strauss and his comemporaries. Mehta has led the IPO in several Strauss waltzes and polkas as well as in his popular operetta Die Fledermaus. Of all Viennese operettas. The Merry Widow is one of the most popular and, as is usual with the art form, full of dialogue. Rather than having large amounts of German dialogue on stage here, popular eotertainer Tuvia Tzafir will join the cast in one of the speaking roles. "He will also narrate the rest of the story to the audience and so there will be no need for any German dialogue.

I think it's a great idea,"
How does Mehta feel at 60?

"It's only a number, really nothing more," he says with his contagious smile.

Mehta's April 29 birthday was celebrated in style during two gala concerts in the US this spring, which were used for raising money for the IPO. "The Los Angeles concert [on his actual birthday] was exciting because I had on stage both the IPO and the Los Angeles Philharmonic. And 1 had Barenboim, Periman and Zukerman with me there. I couldn's have wished for anything beiter. And theo came the dinner after the concert with 800 people who were all my friends. You know wherever I looked there were friends. It was wonderful."

Professionally, Mehta is at his peak. "I had a very good half a year before coming here. First, MICHAEL AJZENSTADT the three months in Chicago doing [Wagner's] Ring were pure bliss. The Chicago Lyric Opera orchestra is the most willing. hard-working ensemble I know. And I had a great cast. You know after 30 years working with siogers you really get to appreciate the great ones." How does Mehta differentiate between a very good singer and a great one?

"Good singers [are those] we conductors have to give in 10, even if we don't want to. The great singers siog and act and are in contact with the orchestra all the time. I'm angry when there are singers who think there is no one else on the stage. Each singer must realize that he is part of the entire tapestry. That's the only way to do opera."

After Chicago and some tour concerts with the IPO, Mebta changed genres and spent several months in Florence leading various Italian operas including Aida and Lucia di Lammermoor.

On top of all that he was recently appointed music director of the Bavarian Staatsoper in Munich, the first time in his career be will actually be in charge of an opera

"I'm not the only person in charge, they have a general director. But I will do three new productions a year and give them 40 evenings each season. The reason I accepted it is because of the repertoire: new productions I can do all over the world." Mehta will devote five months a year to Munich when his contract begins in the fall of 1998. Does that mean less time with the IPO?

"I'm not going to stop coming here - as long as they want me but the periods might be a little bit

Zuhin Mehta will he leading the IPO in 'The Merry Widow' for the first time.

The IPO is also celebrating its 60th birthday, for which the orchestra and Mehta are planning an extraordinary series of events, slated for the second part of "This is going to be the most

Meanwhile the end of the current season features the Lehar (July 25-August 1) and this week a program of works by Barlok and Richard Strauss, a composer relaovely new for the IPO.

Why does Mehta program so many different works for his IPO concerts? Surely he could have passed his annual Israeli July in a much quieter fashion, leading no more than one or two different

The two faces of Karmiel

THERE are two ways to enjoy the Karmiel Dance Festival at 1:30 a.m. The most obvious one is to roam the streets and enjoy the incredible sight of thousands of people - young and old alike - celebrating the great tradition of Israeli folk dancing without any sign of faugue.

Then you could continue through the parks and streets of the city and revel in the carnival atmosphere. This is what makes Karmiel one of a kind, this is why the festival will never lose its magic.

The other way to take in the festival is to attend one of the various artistic programs. But watching the Caracas Ballet perform Carmina Burana past midnight is not an easy task. The costumes are colorful and evocative, the music is gorgeous but somehow the movement itself is repeduous and boring.

On the whole, the artistic component of this year's Karmiel festival was considerably lacking. Ballet Braunschweig from Germany, undoubtedly the most serious visiting company, seemed second or even third rate compared to Batsheva; the folkloristic oriented Ballet Espanol looked like a poor tourist attraction; and it was left to the Kibbutz Contemporary Dance Company, as usual, to save the day. The premiere of Rami Beer's When Most I Wink was the festival's highlight.

These were five gifted, superlative performers in control of their bodies to such a remarkable degree that they seemed to overcome any limitations of nature and go beyond the vocabulary of physical movement.

If there was any shortcoming, it was in the choreography, which tended to have a sameness, and emphasis on the modern tendency to focus on gymnastics and quirks. Except for one section made up of solos and duos devised by Talis Paz logether with French choreographer Philippe Blanchard, the choreography was by Swedes Jens Ostbergs and Oran Andersson. The music ranged from bursts of sound The first item, Steep in Hew

The last one was a kind of story, entitled Arrival of Queen of Sheba, for whom a door and a red carpel were in evidence, though the queen never came. This had its amusing moments - as did earlier duos by Boaz Cohen (remembered from his Kibbutz company days), Rafi Saadi, Yamit Kalif and Eytan Subek.

HEN the Kronos Quartet played its rendi-tion of Jimi Hendrix's "Purple Haze" as one of the four encores to its three-hour concert, the 1,000-strong andieoce applauded with yells and footstompiog more akin to the world of rock. It was the kind of reaction these musicians have come to expect the world over:

More surprising, however, was the quartet's largely one-dimensional music. Judith Shatin's Elijah's Charior, a dialogue between the strings and a prerecorded shofar, was truly unworthy. The rest of the program focused on two things: minimalism and folk-cum-ethnic influences. One or two such pieces are enjoyable, but five is a bit much. The quartet is much calmer and subtler than a decade ago. Its amplification and lighting effects are more subdued, the style of playing is less aggressive. But its program here suffered from lack of versatility. And when it opted for Schnittke's highly demanding second quartet, the only "classical" music piece in the lineup, it failed miserably. Schnittke and light shows, no matter how subtle, just don't go together. Kronos is much more versatile, interesting and gripping in its recordings. Tel Aviv Performing Arts Center, July 13.

ARGENTINIAN-born Alberto Bohbouth, a remarkably versatile pianist, presented a recital of mostly musical trifles in a variety of styles and genres.

Appropriately entertaining as it was for a hol Jerusalem evening in a poorly venolated ball, it laeked a pièce de résistance, which would have lent some musical substance to the program. Bohbouth has a delightfully light hand which makes the dancelike pieces dance, be it Bartok's Romanian Folk Dances or Ravel's Alborada del Grocioso. A display of considerable virtuosity was accomplished in Poulenc's and Prokofiev's toccatas and Liszt's Ballade No. 2. And the delicacy and subtlety in Chopin's Scherzo No. 2 were enjoyable.

WHAT could have been a fascinating, even hypnotizing evening of Indian music, performed on sarod by Sangay Sharma and on tablas by Ustad Sabir Khan, was reduced to a deafening beating on the eardrums by an electronic amplification system. This was as superfluous as it was amateorish-ly handled. The last thing needed by the Israel Museum's small auditorium, with its reasonably good acoustics, is amplification. (Even the guitars' and lutes' natural sounds can be heard there clearly.) The inevitable, deplorable result was the total loss of the many subtleties of the instruments' tone colors and nuances, and of one of the most precious quality of this music - its inornaey. What it all amounted to was a brutal vulgarization of an ancient, dignified and extremely refined music tradicion. Why the museum should have stooped so low as to adjust its performance techniques to cheap nightclub convention remains an unanswered question.

In his solos, the astonishing dexterity of Sabir Khan's tabla drumming and his accuracy in performing the most intricate rhythms could, nevertheless, be admired. Sharma's remarkably controlled command of the sarod was likewise impressive. Their development from an extremely slow start through imperceptibly accelerating tempi to a stirring climax was achieved with considerable artistry, io spite of the adverse circumstances. Gov't weighs easing restrictions on purchase of foreign securities

THE Treasury and the Bank of Israel are contemplating lowering capital gains taxes on foreign securities and easing restrictions on the purchase of foreign stocks and bonds, government sources hinted yesterday.

The plans aim to exempt institutional investors from paying taxes on gains from foreign securioes, in the framework of broader foreign currency deregulation, as well as the elimination of the 35 percent tax currently imposed on institutional investors' profits from overseas investments.

Other proposals include allowing provident funds to invest 5% of their assets abroad, instead of the current 2.5%. Bankers and analysts said such ideas could be beneficial to the capital market in the long run, though in the short term they might further aggravate its current crisis.

According to Amir Barnea, a partner in Singer-Barnea, the proposals are likely to improve provideor funds' yields in the long run, since they will be provided alternative investment routes and be able to diversify their risk.

However, Barnea warned that the measures cannot be expected to improve the stability of the capital market in the short term.

"The large provident fund redemptions stem from the crisis on the local market. 1 don't see how measures of this kind can stabilize the market," he said.

Hanna Pri-Zan, senior vice president and manager of the securities division at Bank Hapoalim, said the tax exemption on foreign investments would improve the funds performance and reduce the capital market volability. For instance, she said, El Al has achieved high yields after investing $5 million in a Wall Street-based investment portfolio earlier this year.

However, a senior banking official was less optimistic. The provident funds' low yields reflect the poor performance of fund managers, he said, adding that if the managers are not capable of making good investments on the local market, it is even less likely that they would succeed overseas.

"If I were a fund manager I would invest no more than 1% of assets abroad, since local funds do not have the infrastructure or tools with which to know what's going on overseas and where to invest," market is very delicate and as long the economy continues to suffer from basic structural problems, including slow progress in the liberalization and privatization process, the crisis is expected to continue.

As part of the government's

As part of the government's effort to address the capital market crisis, the Treasury is reportedly considering imposing taxes on short-term savings plans in an attempt to prevent the transfer of deposits from provident funds to saving plans.

Over the last two years, a large percentage of the public's with-drawals from the funds was reinvested in index-linked saving plans, which pay a relatively high interest. The Treasury reportedly believes that imposing taxes oo these plans will encourage savers to keep their money in long-term savings, like the provident funds, which are not subject to taxation. However, banking sources are also skepocal about the proposal's impact on the capital market.

The proposal is likely to shift the saving market's center of gravity from short to long-term plans, they said, but there is a risk that such measures would ulomately induce increased consumer spending at the expeose of savings.

Knesset panel discusses business grants

EVELYN GORDON

THE Industry and Trade Ministry's investment center approved $10.8 billion worth of investments during the last four years, of which $5.6b, have so far been implemented – an increase of 113 percent over the previous four years, center head Moshe Dovrat told the Knesset

Economics Committee yesterday.

Dovrat said that if all of these investments were actually implemented, they would create 82,000 new jobs and $15b. in annual turnover, including about $10.7b. in exports. The $10.8b. in new iovestments included $1.3b. of foreign capital, be said.

These figures indicate that the Capital Investment Encouragement Law has been a success, so the Treasury should not be reducing the maximum grant size from 34% to 20% of the total investment, he said.

However, Dovrat did not say how much the government had to pay to attract this $10.8b. Treasury representative Ron Ayalon said that for foreign investment, every dollar brought in under the law requires the government to pay 60 cents in grants. This, he said, is an "exaggerated and unjustified" price.

Furthermore, Ayaloo said, only 7% of all investment makes use of this law, and only 25% of industrial investment, which shows that it is not essential.

Tourism Ministry Director General Eli Gonen charged that reducing the grants would seriously hurt the construction and expansion of hotels, while the Local Authorities Union charged that the government's decision would hurt the periphery.

Committee chairman Elie Goldschmidt (Labor) promised that the committee would serve as a "protest vigil" against reductions in the grants.

Tadiran Telecom installs digital system in Bulgaria

JENNIFER FRIEDLIN

TADIRAN Telecommunications has installed a digital communications network in the Simitly region of Bulgaria, the company announced yesterday.

The contract, worth $2 million, was Tadiran Telecommunications' second such project in Bulgaria. Two years ago, the company installed a system in the Varna region of the country and has also installed a number of systems throughout many CIS republics.

The new system will replace the currently used analog system and offer users a host of services, such as call-waiong and call-forwarding. The state phone company, Bulgaria Telecommunications Co., will operate the network.

Tadiran Telecommunications, the Petah Tikva-based subsidiary of Tadiran Ltd., designs, develops and manufactures telecommunications equipment and systems worldwide. In Israel, the company supplies telecommunications equipment and systems and offers a line of products for public networks and for business and residential customers.

Officials join forces to defend planned cuts

THREE ministries, together with the Nacional Insurance Institute, yesterday defeoded their claim that low-income families will not be affected by the government's proposed NIS 4.9 billion budget

During a briefing, senior officers from the Finance, Health, and Labor and Social Affairs ministries said they felt it economically unsound to raise taxes and had to find alternative methods for reducing the budget deficit and subsequently lowering inflation.

"The government decision was derived from a macroeconomic need, not a microeconomic one," said Finance Ministry budget department director Ron Kroll. DAVID HARRIS

"To make almost NIS 5b. in cuts is a very difficult thing to do and it has meant we have had to hit every sector."

The only oegative effects which will be felt by low-income families, if the proposals are implemented, are a "minimal payment" for doctor's appointments and hospital outpatient visits, and a 13 percent increase in transport fares, which were long overdue, according to government economists.

The poor will gain from the proposed changes in the Demobilized Soldiers Law and possible reforms in NII cootributions, which are currently under discussion, said Kroll's deputy Haim Peltz, responsible for the social budget.

Peltz defended the cabinet proposal to reduce child allowances for families to which the head of the household earns more than the average wage. Only a third of all families with children will face a reduction, and only the wealthiest 23% would have their entire allowances cut for their first and second child, he said.

The child allowance proposals have been criticized by ecoomists because they only take into account to earnings of the usually male head of the household, not his spouse.

French businessman: Europeans no longer want to invest in Mideast

FRENCH and other European businessmen, who were thinking of investing money in Middle East development projects, lost all interest after the election of Prime Minister Bioyamin Netanyahu, according to Lionel Stolern, president of the France-Israel Chamber of Commerce.

"Whatever Mr. Neranyahu will choose to do on the poliocal level, there is already a change. Those who started considering Israel as a potential bridge to a common market in the Middle East have gone home," he said. "Nobody in France or in Europe believes in the construction of a regional economy in the Middle East anymore. Nobody will invest even one cent in it."

However, Stoleru said be believes that the Israeli economy is efficient enough to develop itself alone.

Stoleru, who also presides over the France-Israel House (FIH), the only European establishment to promote commercial activities between Israel and the European Union, said he is resigning from his position because he didn't get any help from the Israeli government or Israeli busioesses in financing FIH activities.

FIH, inaugurated three years ago by presidents Chaim Herzog and Francois Mitterrand, was meant to become a leading meeting place for businessmen from Israel and Europe.

However, it was scheduled to close down this month, because its management had failed to raise the 30 million francs owed in back rent. In a last minute effort, Stoleru succeeded in raising the money, with the help of members of FIH's board, thus ensuring its existence for the next 10 years. Stoleru criticized Israel's business community for not investing in FIH.

"How can one explain the fact that Israel Aircraft Industries, with our help, sold five Hedron planes to France, and yet have never given us one dollar? Israeli enterprises must understand that beyond their own interest lies a collective interest in developing commercial ties between Europe and Israel." he said.

WALL STREET REPORT

NEW YORK (AP) - Stock prices tumbled yesterday, with the Dnw iodustrials staging its fnurthworst point drop ever, on continued warries ahnut corparate

Technology companies led the way lower following some disap-pointing profit news last week. The techoningy-ladeo Nasdaq composite index plunged searly 4 percent and is now near to where it began the year.

The Dow Jones industrial average, the market's must widely watched iodex, coded down 161.05 points, or about 2.9 perceot, at 5,349.51, according to preliminary calculations at the 4 p.m. close of the New Ynrk Stock Exchange. That was the steepest slide since the 171.24-point drop of March 8. With the sell-off, the Dow onw has shed 7.4 percent from the record 5,778.00 set May

NBA shopping spree continues unabated

NEW YORK (AP) - One weekend into the free agent market and nearty half a billion dollars has already been spent.

The Miami Heat and New York Knicks are in for $350 million, the Indiana Pacers have committed $80m and the Los Angeles Lakers are waiting for Shaquille O'Neal to answer their

All around the NBA, teams are lining up with tens of millions more, and the best players lucky ecough to be without contracts are enjoying an unprecedented payday.

luwan Howard, the 23-year-old forward from the Washington Bullets, reportedly agreed to a seveo-year, $98m deal with Miami. The Heat also were said to have agreed to terms with Alonzo Mourning on a seven-year contract

Miami still has $2-3m of salary cap room and still needs a point guard - especially if Tim Hardaway agrees to a free agent deal with Hous-10n - and Pat Riley may pursue Derek Harper, whose rights were renounced by the New York ing scorer in the Dream Team's five exhibition Knicks on Sunday.

That allowed New York to sign free agent guards Allao Houston (Detroit) and Chris Childs (New Jersey) and finalize a trade for twotime All-Star and former overall No. 1 pick Larry Johnson. Charlotte received forward Anthony Mason and center Brad Lohaus from the Knicks.

Houston will get $56m over seven years and Childs gets $24m over six years. "We hit the jackpot," Knicks' GM Ernie Grunfeld said. "We'll be one of the top teams competing for the championship, not only this year but for years to come." Early Saturday morning, Houstoo told the Knicks he'd accept their offer. If Houston had wavered, Grunfeld was ready to call Reggie Miller's agent.

"You've got a lot of players that probably haven't got to the playoffs yet or the second round that are making $10m plus. That I doo't agree with," Miller said after the US Olympic Team beat Greece 128-62. Miller was the leadgames, averaging 14.2 points.

Another Olympian, Charles Barkley, said the NBA had squashed the proposed three-team trade that would have sent him to the Houston Rockets, Sam Cassell and Robert Horry to Denver and Dikembe Mutombo to Phoenix.

"One of my agents said the league wouldn't let the deal go through because too much tampering had been involved," Barkley said. "1 think that's gutless on the part of the NBA because everybody has tampered. To hold me hostage because they're trying to prove a point is

Miller, upon hearing Barkley's conspiracy theory, took ao easy shot at his Dream

"Whatever Charles says, do not believe him,"

Gary Paytoo agreed to a seveo-year, $85m contract with the SuperSonics, the team he led to the NBA Finals last year. The Heat were the last team to have a shot at Payton after the Knicks, Hornets, Rockets and Bucks dropped out, but they lost out when Seattle increased its offer. The signing was to be anonunced yesterday.

"I don't oeed Michael money. I'm glad with what I've got. Mike wanted one year, I wanted seven, so I'm all right," Payton said in reference to Michael Jordan's one-year, $25m contract with the Bulls.

The Lakers, who have offered about $95m over seven years to O'Neal, lost a chance to sign Dale Davis as they waited for O'Neal to make up his mind between Los Angeles and Orlando.

"The financial package will be incredible, so it's not something we're dwelling on," said O'Ncal's agent, Leonard Armato. "The main factors are the likelihood of a championship and the feeling Shaq has about the city. Orlando wants us to explore the options, then they'll put their best foot forward."

Davis, told the Lakers wanted to wait for O'Neal, chose to re-sign with Indiana for seven years and $42m, sources said. Indiana also reached agreement with Antonio Davis, who will re-sign for $38.5m over seven years.

In Houston, it looks like Hakeem Olajuwon will be wearing a Rockets uniform for the rest of

The Houston Chronicle reported Sunday that the superstar center has agreed in principle to a five-year contract worth between $55-60m.

Although exact terms were not known, the first year's salary would be about $8m with a league-maximum 20 percent escalation each

The new deal puts Olajuwon just ahead of David Robinson, who signed a deal with the San Antonio Spurs reportedly worth $66m for six

Olajuwoo's oew deal, aloog with Clyde Drexter's salary, means the Rockers have two players making more than $13m, which is more than half of the $24.3m salary cap for next

If the Rockets can finalize a trade for Barkley, his $4.6m paycheck would take the total to oearly $18m for three players.

Podenzana wins 15th stage, Riis holds onto yellow jersey

VILLENEUVE-SUR-LOT (Reuter) - Veteran Italian Massimo Podenzana osed the last stage hefore arduous climbs in the Pyrenees to score his first stage win in the Tour de France

The 34-year-old Podenzana escaped from a group of six frontrunners with 10 kilometers remaining to claim the day's 15th stage over 176 kms from Tulle.

He crossed the line in Villeoeuve-sur-Lot 37 seconds ahead of secood-placed Italiao Giuseppe Guerini with Belgian Peter Van Petegem third a further 13 seconds hack.

Dane Bjarne Riis stayed quietly in the pack, which came in over five minutes later, to retain the race leader's yellow jersey.

England bids to save its Five Nations future

Football Union president Joho Richardson said he was seeking orgent talks to prevent England being thrown out of the Five Nations championship, Richardsoo rejected soggestions that England had been told that they would be ejected before Saturday's announcement by the Five Nations Committee representing Ireland, Wales and Scotland and supported by France. There was no indication of the RFU's annual general meeting in London on Friday, when Richardson was elected and optimism was expressed that a solution would be found to the problem. "The RFU is surprised by this decisioo of the Five Nations Committee, taken without inviting an England representative," Richardson said. "We remain committed to finding a solution and will continne talks with the relevant perties."

The statement was agreed by other RFU officials, including executive committee chairman Cliff Brittle who has stated that he was opposed to the Sky TV deal, LONDON (Reuter) - Rugby which England negotiated on its own and which sparked the disagreement with the other countries.

The simmering conflict broke on Saturday when former freland captain Tom Kiernan, the chairman of the Five Nations Committee, and other Irish, Scots and Welsh officials believed that Bagland had disregarded their request to put their imminent exit from the Five Nations in front of the Annual General Meeting

The move to expel England was agreed and will be activated in February wheo England is scheduled to play its first fixture in the 1997 Five Nations.

England's income from Sky is due to be £87.5 million. Wales has been offered £40m, Scotlant £20m and Ireland £18m.

England did receive some co-couragement, from French coach Jean-Claude Skrela

He told Le Journal de De manche: "Even though we well expecting it, I couldn't believe." would really come to this France-England matches such exciting moments. Work the tournament lose its p without England?"

TODAY, they are known primarily as the kings of middle-brow literary costume drama à la Raom With a View and Howard's End. But the producer/director team of Ismail Merchaot and James Ivory started out by making rougher, more biting films about Indian life and, later, the messes that result when Westerners become seduced by it.

In partnership with novelist/screenwriter Ruth Prawer Jhabala, a Polish-Jewish refugee who has spent much of her adult life in India, they created such movies as The Househalder (1963) and Shakespeare Wallah (1965) small, affecoonate, yet clear-eyed dramas about the social constrictions and illusions on both sides of the East-West divide: They plow some of the same ground as E.M. Forster did in A Passage to India (little wonder the Merchant-Ivory-Jhabala troika later nimed to filming the early 20th-century English novelist's works), but do so with more of an insider's inomacy. Both earlier movies bave been shown recently on Second Showing and tonight at 10 the cable channel is airing Heat and Dust (1983), the last of their three-way cinematic collaborations to be set in the subcontinent. Julie Christie plays a contemporary Englishwoman on the trail of her long-dead aunt who disappeared in a cloud of scandal during the British Raj. History begins to repeat itself as Christie becomes involved with her Indian landlord.

Heat and Dust is the fictional expansion on a personal theme which Jhabala expressed in the introduccion to one of her novels. In it, she describes life in India as an oppression of sensorv and social overload that one longs to escape. Yet only a day after she has arrived in some quiet, green European oasis, Ihabala misses the noises, colors, crowds and gossip of her life in India and is reluctantly drawn back.

THE PEREZ FAMILY - Mira Nair's movie, based on a comic novel by Christine Bell about Cuban refugees in Miami, offers a peculiar grab-bag of bits and misses. While burdened with a preposterous plot, some outrageous ethnic stereotypes and an occasionally klutzy visual style, the movie treats the characters with such a spiked sense of bumor and such basic goodness of beart that, in the end, most of the flaws fall away. The picture is just too off-beat and energetically goofy to be dismissed. A remarkably fleshy Marisa Tomei stars as Dottie Perez, an ex-hooker who rolls her hips and her r's with the same overblown ay caramba emphasis. Also with Alfred Molina, Angelica Huston and Chazz Palminteri. (English dialogue, Hebrew subtitles. Parental guidance suggested)

Peretz warns gov't: Revoke economic program or face strike

HISTADRUT Chairman Amir Peretz yesterday called on Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu and Finance Minister Dan Mcridor to have the courage to admit their mistake and cancel the government's economic program.

Unless the Treasury opens negotiations with the Histadrut by midnight to modify the draconian measures imposed on the weaker classes, the Histadrui will halt the entire economy tomorrow, in a 10-hour warning strike from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m. with the option of a two-hour extension, Peretz said.

If the government revokes its cconomic decrees, Peretz said during the Knessel debate on the no-confidence motions on the economic program, it will save the stock market, as well as prevent unjust harm to low-income wage earners.

Peretz accused Netanyahu and Meridor of causing the stock market crash by repeatedly shouting "the economy is in a crisis" in an attempt to justify the draconian economic measures they are inflicting on the weaker classes

He noted that the national mood has just as significant an effect on the capital market as "the learned topics of the Treasury officials. The public confidence in the stock market and the confidence of foreign investors are equally important, and they depend on the political direction the government is taking.

MICHAL YUDELMAN

"Now that the prime minister is back and we've finished the American chapter, it's time to revoke the cabinet decision taken so hastily and to make the right decisions," he added.

Meanwhile, the Histadrut continued its preparations for the strike. Micbel Elmaliah, head of the strike headquarters, issued instructions to all the large unions for the strike, which is to encompass the public sector, Civil Service, and government corporations, including the banks, health funds, El Al, airports, bus companics, trains, Israel Aircraft the Electric Corporation, and local authorities. At the same time, a group of the stronger unions is planning to set up a new labor federation, which will be able to take more militant action against the government.

These unions, which include Bezeq, IAI, the Electric Corporation, and the Israel Broadcasting Authority, maintain that the Histadrut is not aggressive enough in its fight against the government. They attacked the Histadrut leadership for shortening the strike to 10 hours and stressed that it should last for at

Strike may hit air travel

HAIM SHAPIRO

IF you are going abroad tomorrow, your plans could be seriously affected by the planned general strike. It may keep everyone from air traffic controllers to baggage handlers off the job for 10 hours. But the Airports Authority has petitioned Tel Aviv District Labor Court, seeking a restraining order which would stop the Histadrut strike at airports and border crossings.

In its petition, the authority said Ben-Gurion Airport is the country's only air gateway to the world, both for passengers and goods, and that the damage to the country and its economy would be enormous if the strike takes place. If the court does not issue an order, the authority will have to notify all the airlines serving Israel, so they may move their flights forward or delay them, to avoid a situation in which incoming planes are

PM's aide firm Amidror appointed aide on training to defense minister accident

ARIEH O'SULLIVAN

BRIG.-GEN. Ya'acov Amidror, who as head of the Intelligence Corps assessment division often presented views opposed to the former government's optimism on peace, has been appointed mili-tary aide to Defense Minister Yitzhak Mordechai.

Amidror's appointment, approved by Chief of Staff Lt.-Gen. Amnon Lipkin-Shahak, will take effect in the coming weeks, Amidror's the IDF and Defense Ministry said in a joint statement.

Amidror was often seen at the Knesset Defense and Foreign Relations Committee, where he briefed MKs on IDF intelligence assessments, particularly regarding the Syrians and Palestinians. He reportedly professed little faith in Syrlan President Hafez Assad's readiness to make peace with Israel, and repeatedly pointed out the Palestinian Authority's unwillingness to seriously crackdown on Islamic fundamentalists.

At one point, premier Shimon Peres prevented Amidror from flying to Washington to present a report on Palestinian infringements of the Oslo accords. The report was shipped on its own. Amidror, 48, spent the bulk of his military career in intelligence. He is a graduate of the National Defense College and holds an M.A. in political science.

Death threats to Meretz councilor over Bar-Ilan flap

JERUSALEM City Councilor Oman Yekutieli (Meretz), who is leading the fight lo keep Rehov Bar-Ilan open on Shabhat, said vesterday he has received several death threats since the battle over the closure of the street heated up over the weekend.

"I've received three or four phone calls over the past two nights from people threatening to kill me," Yekuneli said. He said he had not filed a complaint with

"This is nothing new for me. I have been threatened in the past, and I didn't expect that things would be different this time," he

Yekutieli is finalizing plans for a large demonstration this Saturday afternoon. Organizers have already asked the police for a permit for 2,000 demonstra-

"I have always been opposed to violence, and our intention is not to escalate the tension," Yckutieli said. "We aren't going to protest on Rebov Bar-Ilan itself, but several meters away, at a spot we have protested at before."

Organizers include people from across the political spectrum, united in their support for keeping the street open. Yekutieli said. "This is not a Meretz demonstration. There is a group of most of them Likud activists, who are helping," he said.

Haredi activists, meanwhile, have vowed to bring out thousands of protesters for Rehov Bar-llan's closure on Shabbat. Police estimated over 10,000 haredim took part in last Saturday's unrest.

Mayor Ehud Olmert, just back from the US, called last Saturday's Meretz protest a "provocation.

"Can someone explain to me why, when the street is open, there is a need to have a motorcade?" he said. "If the same thing were done in an Arab neighborhood ... the entire world would jump up and complain."

Thai princess urges protection of species that may bring cures

Princess Chulabhorn Mahidol of Thailand, a professor of chemistry, appears before a scientific

PRINCESS Chulabhorn Mahidol of Thailand yesterday urged that the world's rapidly disappearing plant and animal species be protected, as they may produce medicines and other means to serve

A professor of organic chemistry and head of a research institute in Bangkok, she lectured in Jerusalem on "Natural Products for the Improvement of the Quality of Life." Making her third visit to Israel, she was a guest lecturer at the International Symposium on Sweeteners.

The conference, organized by the Hebrew University and the International Union of Pure and JUDY SIEGEL

Applied Chemistry, is being attended by experts from 14 countries and is the largest scientific meeting on the subject ever held. The princess, 39, has received numerous honorary doctorates and awards, including UNESCO's Einstein Gold Medal, and was the World Health Organization's ambassador of goodwill. Lecturing on the potential of numerous plants growing in her country for use as anti-cancer agents and sweeteners, she said species are being wiped out daily due to urbanization and destruction of tropical rain forests. It is ironic, she noted, that "patent law protects corporations and individuals from having their ideas stolen, while nature's ecodiversity is unprotected. Unless we take care of our natural resources now, it will be too late."

Sbe recalled that when she was three years old, an Israeli expert came to her country to help set up a moshav with her father's help. In 1975, she underwent training in Israel. The princess, who wore a necklace with her name in Hebrew, said she is very impressed by the wisdom and unity of Israel. I am an admirer of the people of Israel for their efforts to build a nation. PRISONS Service Commissioner Arye Bibi has ordered the transfer of Yitzhak Elisha, the intelligence officer at Ashkelon's Shikma Prison, after an attempted escape by three security prisoners last

.An investigation revealed that there was a hreakdown in the prison's intelligence system and that the escape attempt should have been discovered in advance.

The prisoners - Nadel Zalum, serving two life terms and 30 years for murder, Hamed Mahmud, serving 30 years for ter-ror attacks; and Hafez Nimer, serving 20 years - have been moved to Beersheba Prison. They disguised themselves as women by wearing improvized dresses made from colored sheets, and slid down a hole they carved in their cell floor to the toilets below. The attempted escape occurred on Friday morning when families of security prisoners had arrived to visit. At around 9 a.m., a warden noticed two figures leaving the lavatories and approaching the gate to the visiting rooms. The warden suspected they were men dressed in women's clothing. The third prisoner was captured as he stood near the gate.

A preliminary investigation revealed that the three had planned their escape in advance. Bibi ordered an immediate inquiry, which led to the temporary suspension of the intelligence.

"It should have been clear that something out of the ordinary was being planned, not necessarily an escape," said the spokesman.

Traffic accidents claim 19,000 lives since 1948

A NEWLY established Ministerial Committee on Traffic Accidents will submit its draft recommendations to the Knesset next week, Transport Minister Yitzhak Levy told the Knesset State Control Committee yesterday.

Former interior security minister Moshe Shahal revealed that the previous government had approved a five-year plan to combat traffic accidents last September, but a budget was never approved for it. State Comptroller Miriam BenEVELYN GORDON

Porat stressed that it is possible to reduce the number of accidents. and measures to do so should be implemented at any cost, because nothing is worth more than human

state, some 19,000 people have been killed in about 570,000 traf-Levy said he favors setting up an authority to coordinate the work of the various government bodies which deal with traffic accidents. National Infrastructure Minister Ariel Sharon promised a major effort to improve the quality of the nation's roads.

Committee chairman Ran Cohen (Meretz) said he would begin consultations with Ben-Porat and committee members on the possibility of setting up a state commission of inquiry into traffic accidents. A new law grants the committee the power to establish such a commission by a twothirds vote, if Ben-Porat consents.
